The multifaceted approach is welcomed here as supporting those facing multiple disadvantage requires services to be present in reaching people where they are. Very often for those who present with multiple disadvantage, the journey to getting help and support is not straight forward. Trust in the system is essential as many feel they have been let down by services in the past. There is also a need for organisations to reflect on the nuanced skills required in frontline practice that support those facing disadvantage to achieve a fulfilling life. Working alongside vulnerable people, is challenging and we need to value frontline practitioners as this creates stability in the workforce and consistency for those they are there to support.

What is so important is that exempt accommodation and emergency accommodation providers are monitored closely to ensure public funds are being used to benefit vulnerable people and not company profits.
